PROPOSITION THAT MATTERS

“DO YOU REALLY KNOW WHAT MAKES YOUR ORGANISATION UNIQUE?”

What makes it a place that people want to be part of - to join, to stay and to help it grow? In an ultra-competitive and globalised talent market it is essential that you fully craft and communicate your People Value Proposition (PVP). A PVP is a total design of the value that people receive when they join and stay in your business. It is the essence, the experiences, the culture, and the story of your organisation all rolled into one.

Without a fully designed PVP how can you possibly portray your employer brand to the market in the right way? How can you truly resonate with the people that would thrive in your business? How can you keep your people engaged through times of turbulence?

A fully developed PVP and supporting engagement initiatives has multiple and wide-reaching positive consequences for your business including:

- Attracting the best people & broadening the pool
- Decreasing time to hire
- Boosting employee’s morale
- Increasing retention
- Reducing cost of hiring
- Enhancing employee and customer satisfaction
- Enabling people and HR management to have greater strategic impact
- Consistency of communications internally and externally

At Cpl's Future of Work Institute, we are helping organisations to become talent destinations through a total approach to designing and deploying People Value Propositions, key engagement initiatives and communication strategies.

HOW WE WORK

At the core of how we work is a deep commitment to design, co-creation and collating multiple data sources. This means we work very closely with Leadership, Talent Acquisition, HR, Marketing and Communication teams to ensure full transparency and alignment in any project we do. Often times our focus is on localising the great brand work already done by organisations. Sometimes we need to create a full people value propositions with leadership teams, in other instances we create full Employer Brand programs for our clients.

Our typical engagement process for any of our services follows a simple 5 step process where we define the essence, frame and create the PVP, plan an activation, then activate a relevant solution based on your talent destination challenge. Finally, we ensure impact.

Essence

This stage focuses on understanding your organisation through a number of mechanisms. These can range from workshops, surveys, social footprint analysis and core internal data and programmes.

Create

This stage focuses on taking all of the inputs of the Essence stage and creating either new concepts, or localised concepts- starting with the PVP essence, key themes, and overall recommendations for internal and external activations.

Plan

This phase focuses on turning the create outputs into an experiential marketing and engagement plan that is unique and with a distinctive look, feel and voice. This phase also includes briefings with internal talent acquisition teams and broader stakeholder groups.

Activate

This phase focuses on the activation of the key experiential marketing and engagement elements - these can range from visuals, to online interviews, microsite development, and targeted campaigns to drive interest.

Impact

This phase focuses on ensuring impact. We measure and adjust based on the results of the activation phase in order to ensure success.

SERVICE SPOTLIGHT - THE PVP ASSESSMENT

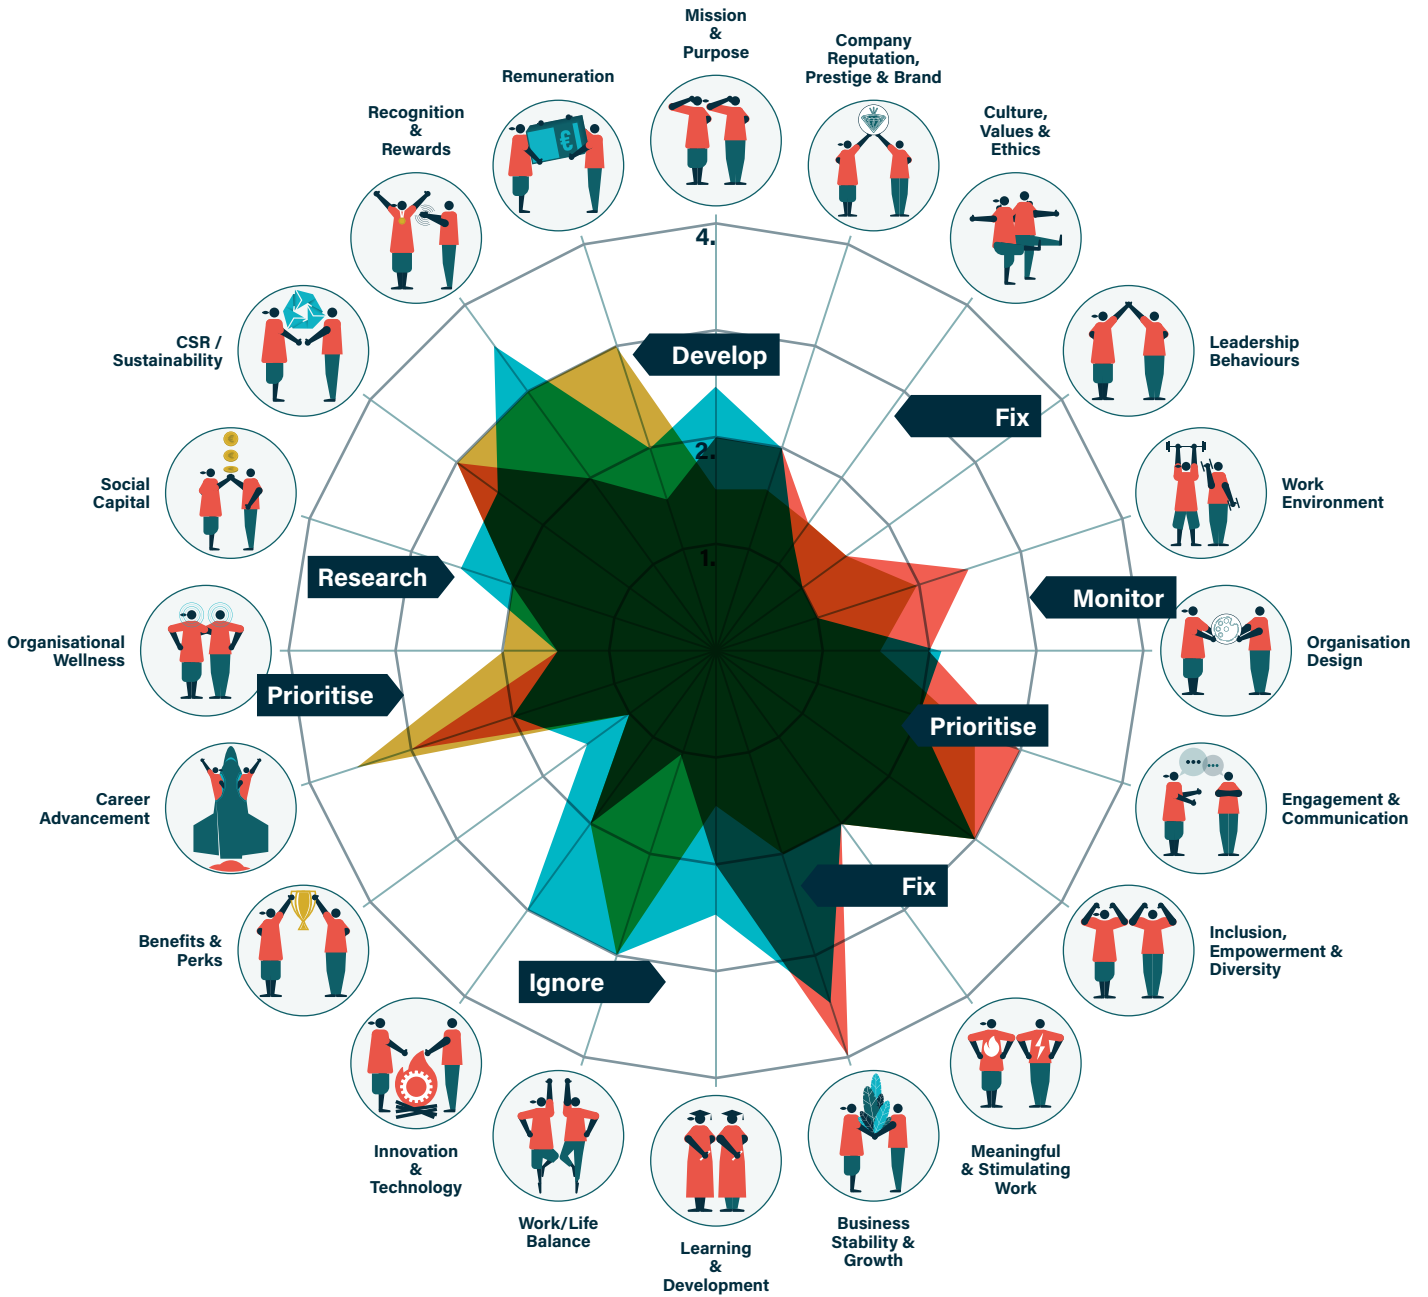

Our PVP Assessment service has been designed to support leaders in developing a full and connected view of the value that current and future employees receive in their organisation. From our research and experience often there is no fully agreed view or connected strategy on what the people value proposition is in an organisation - leading to a lack of alignment and a lack of clarity in what that organisation is great at - resulting in engagement, employer brand and communication strategies that don't fully resonate internally or in the marketplace. This has multiple negative implications including struggles to retain the right talent and challenges in attracting right fit candidates in your business.

Through our research we have identified 20 key elements that are important to consider in assessing and the designing comprehensive PVP. These are 20 elements are considered important in a modern business and criteria that are consciously or subconsciously considered in selecting an organisation to work for. There are differences in importance of these elements across different sectors, cultures and demographics but the model is comprehensive and can adjust to work at a business, business unit, country or demographic level.

The PVP model enables us to plot as a team, via group working sessions, integrated online assessment and existing research analysis, the current view of the PVP in an organisation. A typical PVP plot looks like the one below. This plot highlights the level of maturity across each key PVP areas and also highlights how the leadership team in one business can have differing and mis-aligned views on the PVP of the organisation.

The PVP is comprehensive and covers everything from the obvious - Remuneration, Benefits & Perks to the not so obvious like Social Capital, Innovation & Technology and Leadership Behaviours.
